Historic CIA-SIT Partnership

The Culinary Institute of America’s partnership with SIT marks the first time that the CIA is offering its degree program in Asia.

REALIZE YOUR CULINARY DREAMS

When famed French chef Paul Bocuse called the CIA “the best culinary school in the world” and sent his own son there, the college's reputation for excellence was confirmed internationally. Why is the CIA so widely regarded as the leader in culinary education?

- Since 1946, the college has been providing an extraordinary, world-class educational experience for students.
- Our diverse faculty brings unparalleled industry experience and credentials to the classroom—they’re talented professionals, successful authors, and medal-winners in international culinary competitions.
- Accomplished CIA alumni such as Anthony Bourdain, Rocco DiSpirito, Cat Cora, Dennis Chan, and the rest of the 48,000-plus network of graduates reinforce the college's reputation for quality and leadership.
- A CIA degree opens doors to a wide range of career options, including executive chef, restaurant owner, pastry chef, research chef, food writer, hospitality management professional, and much more.

Gain valuable hands-on experience in the CIA’s comprehensive bachelor’s degree program.
